The challenges we met . . .

Today we are faced with many challenges, choices and problems. These challenges are not much different from those faced by our parents and our grandparents. But the increasing complexity of our world has magnified the importance of our decisions. What we make of ourselves, the world around us, and our solutions to the problems we face depends to a great extent on how we handled the mini-problems of our early years, our school years.

We have selected a number of challenges, choices and problems faced during the past year by students at Tempe High School. We have examined them throughout this book.

Reflect on how we met the challenges of:

Dedication: many long hours were spent studying, practicing and perfecting skills, preparing us for the future.

Individuality: each of us tried to find ourselves and to express that unique, 'one of a kind' person that each of us is.

Communication: through a variety of words, sounds, gestures, looks, common interests and activities, we attempted to let others know who we were, what we felt, what we thought, and what we wanted.

Involvement: active participation in the unique micro world that is Tempe High, whether it was holding our end of a discussion, doing our share in a group assignment, joining a club of special interest to us, going to a game . . . we learned and grew by working with one another.

Sharing: we shared the ups and downs, the successes and failures, the joys and heartbreaks of our year of learning and living.

The Future?

Our future, like the crystal ball, is unclear. We are unsure of the road ahead.
But we are certain that what we do will be a reflection of our years at

HIGHLIGHTS

A school year is loaded with hundreds of impressions and memories. Among them are the problems of choosing classes, getting reacquainted with friends who have been gone all summer, meeting new teachers, cramming for exams, going to dances, cheering yourself hoarse at pep rallies and ball games, working on Homecoming floats, going to that special Homecoming game and the dance afterwards, attending school plays and dance concerts, decorating the halls and classrooms with the traditional symbols of Christmas, voting for Coronation royalty, and participating in the annual snowball fight that occurs on that winter Friday when adventurous souls spend all night hauling the chilly white stuff from the mountains to the campus. But one of the real highlights of the year, one so commonplace that we hardly think of it as a highlight, is going to classes. That's the place where we spend an average of five hours a day, listening, talking, participating, and learning.

SPORTS

Sports in high school involve more students, either as participants or observers, than any other activity except going to classes. The past year saw the Buffaloes field teams in all of the traditional sports of past years as well as in two new ones, both for girls. A gymnastics team was formed and competed with other schools. And a girl's basketball team took to the hardwoods for the first time in Tempe's history. The most popular spectator sports remained football, basketball and wrestling. But with or without a crowd of fellow students, Buff athletes followed the motto of the football team as they tried to "Give What You Got." Some teams won and some teams lost. But all kept trying, learning self-discipline, sportsmanship, and building stronger bodies and minds. In short, whether it was pulling a bow string taut and letting the arrow fly, driving for the green flag, working on the parallel bars, improving a backhand, making a tackle, practicing free throws, jumping into a too-cold pool, running 500 miles in the summer, vaulting, sprinting or hurdling, or taking a called strike, Tempe High's athletes, freshmen, JV's and varsities, both boys and girls, had a successful year because they learned from participation in sports.

INVOLVEMENT

Nearly every student at Tempe High gets involved with some activity during his four years. The variety of options is nearly endless, encompassing everything from athletics and art to war gaming. Some special interests are spin-offs from classes in the curriculum, such as language clubs or the Photography club. Other activities are not really clubs but are extensions of classes which interest students to the extent that they spend long hours outside of the classroom perfecting their skills and learning more about the subject. Examples of this category of activity are the music groups, both instrumental and vocal. There are also the dance groups, the student publications, the Future Farmers of America, the drama clubs, and the speech club. There are those activities to which interested students are elected by their fellow students or by faculty and student committees such as student government, the Cheer lines and the Pom line. Activities aimed at helping a student decide on a future career or to gain work experience while getting credit and getting paid include the Cooperative Office Education class (COE), the Home Economics Related Occupations class (HERO), and the Distributive Education Clubs of America class (DECA). There are those activities in which there is simply enough student interest to gain a group of adherents who want to learn more about the subject. Examples of this type activity are the Ski club, the Backpacking club, the Chess club, the Science club, and the Bicycle club. And there are those clubs aimed at supporting athletic teams such as the BasketBuffs, the Matmaids, the Striders, and the Mermaids. Each group spent many hours in fund raising activities, selling candy or baked goods, washing cars, or sponsoring dances. The money was used to further the organization's goals. But all of these types of involvement had one thing in common. They were aimed at helping their members increase their knowledge—to learn.

CLASSES

Classes are a dominate factor in a Tempe High student's life. From his entering day as a freshman, he is codified by a number representative of his class and he keeps that number, staying with the same group, throughout his four years. From being a scared, lost freshman learning the wonders of the Mass Media and the intricacies of algebra, he moves up the social scale to become a mighty sophomore. His classroom activities include Composition, Creative Expression, more math and probably the joy of dissecting a frog in biology. He also lords it over the new crop of lost freshmen. As a junior, the student learns more about American History than he ever thought possible, explores chemistry, advanced math, and works long hours to make the Junior-Senior Prom a success. Capping his stay at Tempe High, the student becomes a mighty senior whose class choices are greatly varied, government and economics being the only absolute requirements. And he goes through all of the happy moments of measuring for a cap and gown, attending the Prom as a guest, getting "senioritis" in the spring months, and finally graduating. Throughout the entire four year span, he has grown, matured, and, sometimes surprising to himself, he has really learned about life in this world.

POTPOURRI

Many events that are part of a Tempe High School student's life happen outside school, outside of neatly categorized lists. And, unfortunately for school yearbook editors, some things take place after a particular section in which they should have appeared has gone to the printer. In order to record some of these events, we have inserted this section which is somewhat of a "melange" of everything. Students work off campus, both as part of organized groups from the campus and on their own. In terms of occupations, office work and food service jobs are clearly the most popular among students, probably because such occupations are the most plentiful. Some students are involved in an Intern program, working with professionals in many occupations to decide if that is what they want to do with their lives. Other students are volunteers, helping those less fortunate than themselves. And the process of learning, both formally and informally, continues.

Senior Mike Bray is being measured for his graduation cap by Grace Jones from the supplying firm

Through the HERO program, Senior Becky Radar worked as a teacher at McKerny

Sophomore, Kim Brunson was one of many students from Tempe High who worked part time at Monti's La Casa Vieja

As part of the Professional Internship program, Senior Barbara Fredl learned the many tasks of a legal secretary

Junior Peggy Gaudin, a COE student, put her well learned skills to work as reception

As a COE student, Ann Smith acquired the necessary skills to land while studying for Economics, Roxanne Novia finds time to take messages

Looking extremely happy about the dishwashing business is Junior Bill Hartwell

Lisa Pewe, Scott Naw and Mark Odneal perform one of many skits in Mr. Graham's English class.

Senior Michelle French participated in the Professional Internship Program

Reading a "Christmas Carol" were Forensic class members Jim Guthrie, Mark Kendall, Brian Quinn, Kim Spear, Dania Douglas, Mary Gibbs and Doug Tyler

In the Human Relations class, Dawn Hicks and Mitch Jordan act out a typical marriage situation

Between school and part-time jobs we find time to enjoy the many outdoor activities available to us

Kirk Thornhill also volunteered to be a blood donor

FACULTY

Students at Tempe High spend hours each day being influenced by a wide variety of people we neatly label as "teachers" or "faculty". Tempe's faculty is large and diverse, both in age and experience. There is little turnover among them, with the school adding about a half dozen new teachers each year to replace the few who have retired or quit. Teachers are supposed to spend at least eight hours each day at school but find the time runs closer to ten or more. They spend countless hours preparing lesson plans and teaching aids, in composing and then grading tests, in giving individual help to students who are having trouble. They "sponsor" each of the wide variety of clubs and activities available to Tempe High's students. They attend meetings, go to night school to improve themselves, and participate in regular community activities as good citizens. They are here to help students learn but most will admit that they learn as much from the students as the students learn from them.

your writing

To Ralph -

It's been great getting to know you this year - even if it was just briefly (in and out of 7th hour). You have to be one of the sweetest guys in the whole T.V. studio, you're always so nice to me and so cheerful that it really makes me feel good, and makes the afternoon so much nicer. I confess that I peeked at what you wrote in my annual (sorry - but I'm so curious!!!) and I think it's really nice what you wrote for me. Thanks. And I agree that it would be nice to get to know you better too. I'll give you my phone # so you can call and keep in touch this summer or next ~~summer~~ school year (838-1051). I'll probably be working at Apache Lake this summer so if you're passing thru there a stop by and say "hi". Well Ralph, I wish you the best in life and hope you reach all your goals in life - whatever they may be. I really am glad I met you, it's great to have such a nice friend.

Take Care and Love Always,

Lynn Michel '79
